²⁶ Lifestyle | Travel

A luxe bootcamp on the Côte d'Azur takes the pain out of getting in shape

Pampering, pleasure and fitness under the sun? Mais oui, says Gabriel O'Rourke

OU'RE obliged to go 'aaahhhhh'," said therapist Sophie Bonjean as she turned the hose from hot to cold. It's Day One on La Réserve Ramatuelle's Luxury Bootcamp and this, apparently, is doing wonders for my circulation

The morning started gently; yoga by the pool on the comfiest mat you will ever find yourself down-dogging on. "Does everyone speak French?" mumbled the instructor, commencing before anyone had a chance to answer

"Well, I know my gauche from my droite," said a fellow bootcamper "but that's about it." Luckily, the explains Sophie. "We don't want up weight-loss, and practical French intonation was soothing and we pulled through with some good old-fashioned copying.

For breakfast it's egg-white omelettes. But this isn't one of those bootcamps of myth and legend where guests are allowed nothing more than three lemongrass shots a day. The focus at La Réserve Ramatuelle is on the mind as well as the body, and the menu is tailored to each guest's needs. On arrival you have a consultation with Doctor Gastinel who finds out what you want from the five-day bootcamp, and tailors vour exercise and diet accordingly

"It's about customized care," tal or clinic, we want them to enjoy narrow paths of the Cote d'Azur. t." The same applies to food. "We don't want guests to be hun gry, we want hem to realize they need to take care of their body through diet and sport.' Okay, so now for the sport. all It's abou Nordio Walking (for the non-initiated, that's just walking with poles), renowned for speeding guests to feel like they are in a hospi- for navigating your way along the

Each morning, specialist Nordic Walking trainers and down the hilly coast. take guests on 10 to 12-mile walks. It doesn't sound too far (and each dav varies in length and speed) but it takes three four to hours and nimble footwork. The trainers like to big it up too. "Don't eat too much at breakfast or you'll be sick!" stuck with an ominous: The latter is Meteo, a tanned

HEALTHY LIVING | BOOTCAMP WISDOM

Eat slowly

•Eat pulses two to three times a week •No food types are forbidden at night

• Ten hours exercise a week is optimal (impossible for most of us but good to know!) •Try to keep your body quiet after 6pm (again, impossible for many)

• If you want to lose weight do cardio: running or cycling 3 times a week

twenty-something trainer with mountain goat pace, who led us up

"Allez! Allez! Then you will have the sherry," he said as we made our way up a particularly steep hill.

"The sherry?" I asked, liking the sound of this bootcamp more and more. "To drink here?"

"Ha ha ha no, the sherry on the cake: the view!" Wild flowers, clear blue inlets and craggy sunspots: these coastal views r e q u i r e s are enough to inspire the most sluggish guest. You almost expect to see Brigitte Bardot catching a few rays in the secluded spots we march past.

Spending four hours hiking tends to bring on the call of nature, and you won't be surprised to hear there's no powder room in this part said one. Another just of Provence. Take care when finding a suitable spot - all I will say is that others have found themselves trumped while attempting to go to

THE DAY | LA RESERVE

7am: yoga session 8am: buffet breakfast 8.30am: set off Nordic walking 12.00pm: aqua-gym session 1pm: 3-course lunch 3-5.30pm: spa treatments 6.30pm: stretches 8pm: 3-course dinner 10pm: bed

LA RESERVE RAMATUELLE | NEED TO KNOW

•The Bootcamp (which will next run from 18th +33 494 44 94 44 - 23rd September 2011) costs £3,437 per person for five nights accommodation in a Deluxe Double Room on a full board basis as well as the full programme of consultations, personal training, walking guides, and spa treatments. • La Réserve Ramatuelle Hotel, Spa and Villas, Chemin de la Quessine.

83 350 Ramatuelle France, www.lareserve.ch,

 The La Réserve Luxury Bootcamp costs from British Airways operates a Heathrow-Nice £3,400 per person including 5-nights accommodation in a Deluxe Room, full board and all activities and treatments.

 Designed by French architect Jean-Michel Wilmotte this spa-hotel has just 24 rooms (plus 12 private villas which are available to rent). Awarded Best New Hotel for 2011 by the service seven times daily with an eighth flight on Saturdays and Sundays. Costs start at £135.80 return including taxes/fees/charges. • La Réserve Ramatuelle is an hour and a half taxi journey from Nice Airport, and just 20 minutes from Saint Tropez. NB: taxis here don't come cheap.

Wallpaper* Design Awards.

"It's very tough"

the toilet: the unexpected consequence of pulling down one's pants on a nudist beach

Back at the hotel it's time for stretches, and an aqua-gym session for those who are game. Then it's lunchtime, and the tempo shifts down a gear or two. With three courses for both lunch and dinner, bootcamp doesn't seem so bad after all. It's celeriac mousse with vegetables to start, seared duck breast with green beans for the main course and mango cake for pudding. "Duck? Cake? On bootcamp?"

hear you cry. Yes. And all in the name of detoxing. The magic ingredient (or lack of) is that it's all made without additional fats or refined sugars. Also, the service is tactically timed. "It's important to eat slowly says Dr Gastinel. "Your stomach gives you a message, if you eat too fast this message comes too late, so you eat all the pizza." (Needless to say, pizza isn't served on bootcamp). After lunch things just get better: it's scrubs, massages and bodywraps in France's first and only Crème de la Mer spa. Bootcampers have prescribed treatments which focus on "better aging" (prevention rather than cure), help the detox process, and ease muscles after hik-The most outstanding treatment is the daily body-wrap. First you manoeuvre vour wav onto a waterbed (no small feat), where you are slathered with mud (aka seaweed and essential oils). Next, like a scene from an alien movie, the bed springs to life and sucks you into its folds, head first, leaving your feet sticking up into the air until they too are enveloped. It sounds like an experience of questionable appeal, but it is heavenly, and can only be likened to returning to the womb. The re-birth, however, is somewhat startling. It's called Shower Jet treatment, but is more commonly known as being hosed down in cold water. Well, at least Sophie lets you have a good scream.

TRAVEL NOTES | by Zoe Strimpe

CHALETS OPEN IN MALAWI

Malawi, one of Africa's poorest countries, is muscling in on the top tourist dollar and with spectacular, untouched beauty it has lots to offer. Next month is the opening of Mkulumadzi Lodge, eight luxurious chalets set on the banks of the Shire River, each with vegetated roofs home to aloes and grasses. The rare black rino and the first lions to be let loose in the Maiete roam nearby, along with elephants and the other usual suspects. Bailey Robinson offers a combined Zambia and Malawi package staying 4 niahts at Nkwali Camp in the South Luangwa followed by 3 nights at Mkulumadzi from £3,080 per McIlroy's win at the US Golf Open, golf person based on two sharing on a full hoard hasis Rate also includes all flights, transfers and safari activities. mkulumadzi.com/en.

PHEW: A PACKING APP

Does packing cause you stress? Grace Hotels thinks it can help with an app called "Saving Grace" (pictured). It sports pre-set lists for different trip types – winter, summer, activity holiday, short break and so on. Users can

Far left and above left

left: a typical coastal

view from one of the bootcamp's daily walks.

personalise lists by deleting pre-set items or adding you wn items. Once a packing list has been built and saved can be renamed and used gain. The app also features a eadymade list of important hings to do before vou trav I – from travel insurance to hanging currency to packing he iPad and cancelling the apers. Brilliant, no? unes.apple.com/gb/app/savingrace-travel-packing.

GET IN THE GOLFING SPIRIT

Following the success of Rory fans in the mood for a treat should head to the Hastings Hotels in McIlrov's hometown in Northern Ireland for a celebratory package of golf, champagne, spa and delicious food. Rory Glory Package from £186 per person per night. Available until 31 August 2011.

Just like Gosford Park (without the murder)

Luton Hoo is perfect place for a weekend break, says Maggie Campbell

Arrival by chopper isn't thrown in for free, unfortunately TAYCATIONS are all the rage. get to your UK minibreak destination than it would to fly to Spain or get a train to the South of France. Surely the point of staying at home is earth. that you don't have to spend half the weekend travelling?

Luton might not be an obvious desurban life, but it's certainly close to central London (30 minutes by train in fact) and there is a lot more to the grand country house hotel, looking down to the river Lea and surrounded by 1,000 acres of mature parkland, is only a five-minute taxi ride from Luton Parkway station. Despite the odd roar of an Easyjet flight taking off, and distant hum of the motorway, the hotel is ideal staycation material. In just over 24-hours, the knots of city existence had begun to melt away: I felt relaxed, revived, and after two hearty walks around the grounds, even my skin looked clearer (promise)

Before it reopened in 2007 after a multi-million pound refurb, Luton Hoo was a majestic country estate, closed to the public. If parts of it seem familiar – the grand staircase, the imposing pillared Georgian façade - it is because the house has often appeared on the big screen. Scenes from Eves Wide Shut, Enigma and several Bond films were filmed there. Hard as it is to square the idea of Tom fine country house fare with a twist Cruise hanging out in Luton, it is A-listers, although now they come as such as vanilla and café au lait. guests rather than in character.

ensure the hotel's interior stayed surely a priority for any minibreak. Or keeping with its original décor: the Sunday afternoon, for once I didn't patterned carpets and hanging tapes- feel anxious about the prospect of a tries throughout are copies of long drive home. Other guests, enjoyoriginals that lined and hung in the ing long Sunday lunches and extendmain rooms and corridors. Even the ed cream teas, clearly weren't in a oil paintings of family members are hurry to pack up either. In fact, with faithful replicas. Unlike some five-star only a 45-minute journey home, why hotels, the feel is relaxed. Despite its not stay for supper? size, Luton Hoo feels more like an aristo's country seat, rather than a luxury www.lutonhoo.co.uk hotel: French windows are left oper Yes, yes, we know. But it is often on sunny days and children are free to the case that it takes longer to run around the formal gardens (I even saw one small child leapfrogging the topiary hedges), and perhaps most importantly, the staff are down-to

The spa complex is a five-minute walk from the main house across the lawn. The 18-metre pool with sauna tination for a refreshing break from and steam room is a draw for burnt out execs and parents sneaking a night away. For those needing to work off any office aggression, there are also area than the airport. Luton Hoo, a two hard tennis courts, and one grass court that opens for play in summer. If vou still have calories to burn after a full fry-up, there are the grounds.

Whether going for a stroll, a jog, or 18 holes of golf, there is enough parkland for you to feel completely alone. Landscaper du jour, Capability Brown, came to Luton Hoo and worked his magic in the grounds. If you don't feel energetic, from the comfort of one of the many sofas in the public rooms you can look out on to his rolling daffodil-filled vistas undulating down to the river Lea. (The airport tower is hap pily masked by several mature ceda trees).

At night, the house, dark and car dlelit, has a slight air of Gosford Park (without the murder, that is). Dinner is served in the Wernher restaurant, a grand salon which, with its tapestry flanked walls and thick carpet, is sur prisingly cosy. The cuisine is in keeping with the hotel's overall ethos: stalwart ingredients such as duck and true – he did, along with many other beef, enlivened by imaginative sauces

The large bedrooms and thick stone Huge care has clearly been taken to walls ensure a great night's sleep -

Packages from £167 per night.